

Contents

|  |     |
|--|-----|
| Illustrations and Tables   | 7   |
| IntroductionTønnes Bekker-Nielsen   | 13  |
| Fish as a Source of Food in AntiquityJohn Wilkins   | 21  |
| Sources for Production and Trade of Greek and RomanProcessed FishRobert I. Curtis                                     | 31  |
| The Archaeological Evidence for Fish Processingin the Western MediterraneanAthena Trakadas                            | 47  |
| The Technology and Productivity of Ancient Sea FishingTønnes Bekker-Nielsen   | 83  |
| The Reliability of Fishing Statistics as a Source forCatches and Fish Stocks in AntiquityAnne Lif Lund Jacobsen       | 97  |
| Fishery in the Life of the Nomadic Populationof the Northern Black Sea Area in the Early Iron AgeNadežda A. Gavriljuk | 105 |
| Fish and Money: Numismatic Evidence for Black Sea FishingVladimir F. Stolba   | 115 |
| The Archaeological Evidence for Fish Processingin the Black Sea RegionJakob Munk Højte                                | 133 |

|  |     |
|--|-----|
| A Fishy Business. Transport Amphorae of the Black Sea Regionas a Source for the Trade in Fish and Fish Products in the Classicaland Hellenistic PeriodsJohn Lund and Vincent Gabrielsen | 161 |
| Size Matters: Estimating Trade of Wine,Oil and Fish-sauce from Amphorae in the First Century ADBo Ejstrud   | 171 |
| Abbreviations  | 183 |
| Bibliography   | 185 |
| Contributors   | 205 |
| Indices  | 207 |