

Contents

Foreword	7
1. Introduction	9
2. Aspects of the theoretical discussion of towns and their origins in northern Europe ...	13
2.1 Starting point	13
2.2 What is a town?	15
2.3 Henri Pirenne and the trade model	18
2.4 Karl Polanyi and trade in the 'pre-modern' society	19
2.5 Dark Age Economics	19
2.6 The Viking Age in Denmark	20
2.7 The Medieval Town Project	21
2.8 From Tribe to State	21
2.9 The urban stage	22
2.10 A theory concerning the emporium of Ribe	22
3. History of research into Ribe	25
3.1 The Ribe Episcopal Chronicle	25
3.2 The renaissance historians: Hans Svaning, Anders Sørensen Vedel and Niels Krag	26
3.3 The ecclesiastical sphere: Peder Terpager and Matthias Galthen	27
3.4 The mapping of Ribe Town and Field	29
3.5 National romanticism and J. Kinch's Ribe Bys Historie og Beskrivelse	30
3.6 The main restoration of the cathedral and excavations in the churchyard in 1894 and 1930-1	36
3.7 Treasure finds, 1874 onwards	37
3.8 The National Museum's early excavations, 1911-41	37
3.9 Hugo Matthiessen's Middelalderlige Byer	38
3.10 Mogens Bencard and the Grønnegade excavation of 1953-6	38
3.11 The rescue excavation at St Peder's Church, 1960	41
3.12 The slip theory, 1962	42
3.13 New buildings in the town centre, 1959-78	43
3.14 The relocation hypothesis: Dankirke and Okholm, 1962-9	45
3.15 The original Ribe: excavations 1970-76	47
3.16 The Medieval Town Project and the dug-away hypothesis	49
3.17 Danmarks Kirker	51
3.18 Stig Jensen and Per Kristian Madsen	51
3.19 Excavations in the streets of the town from 1984 and the early damming hypothesis	52

3.20 The emporium of Ribe, 1984-	55
3.21 The urban archaeology meeting in Ribe, 1988-	59
3.22 The periodical By, marsk og geest, 1989-	59
3.23 Major excavations in the western suburbs of Ribe, 1987-2000	60
3.24 The use of metal-detectors and water-sieving in excavations in Ribe	63
3.25 Excavations at Ribe Cathedral, 2008-12	63
3.26 Summary: research history and the conceptual framework of town archaeology	65
4. Topography – the coastal zone of West Jutland in the Iron Age, the Viking Period and the Middle Ages	69
4.1 Introduction	69
4.2 The landscape of West Jutland in the Iron Age, the Viking Period and the Middle Ages	73
4.3 Landscape and people	83
4.4 Summary, Topography	123
5. Ribe AD 700-1050.	129
5.1 The meaning of the place-name Ribe	129
5.2 The taphonomy of Ribe	129
5.3 The topography and hydrography of the area around the town	133
5.4 Earlier activity below the area of the town	143
5.5 Methods of excavation and recording	145
5.6 Chronological schemes	148
5.7 The principles for the presentation of archaeological evidence: inclusion and exclusion	149
5.8 Ribe in the 8th century	150
5.9 Ribe in the 9th century	173
5.10 Ribe in the 10th century	204
5.11 Ribe in the 11th century	215
5.12 Summary: Ribe AD 700-1050	224
6. The urbanization of southern Scandinavia, AD 700-1050.	225
6.1 The first emporia	225
6.2 Danish emporia in the 9th and 10th centuries	232
6.3 Towns as centres of the Christian kingship from around the year 1000: the civitas model	243
6.4 Conclusion: From emporium to civitas in Southern Scandinavia	253
7. Summary.	257
Ribe AD 700-1050 – from Emporium to Civitas in southern Scandinavia	257
Why and how did Ribe begin to exist?	258
How did Ribe evolve between AD 700 and 1050 – both in terms of topography and economy?	258
Is the model of Ribe’s development applicable to other early towns in southern Scandinavia?	259
8. Bibliography.	261
Notes.	277
Appendix: Dendrochronology in Ribe until 2015.	279
Appendix: Plate 1.	285